I will now read you a handful of brief statements you may see, read or hear in the next couple months leading up to the November General Election. Please indicate, after hearing each statement, whether you are more likely or less likely to support that candidate.

Q6: As director of Missouri's Department of Revenue, Quentin Wilson's agency overpaid a state tax credit program by $62 million — mailing checks to more than 100,000 people without ever verifying they qualified for the money. Now he wants to be our state's auditor.

More likely: 7%
Less likely: 57%
No difference: 35%

Q7: A state audit of the agency Quentin Wilson ran found it had no real controls over who could access Missouri's financial computer systems — auditors said the department couldn't even produce a list of which employees had access to what.

More likely: 7%
Less likely: 56%
No difference: 37%

Q8: A $17 million computer system meant to modernize vehicle licensing limped along broken for years under Quentin Wilson's watch at the Department of Revenue — later cited by name as a textbook case of government waste.

More likely: 7%
Less likely: 57%
No difference: 36%

Q9: An independent audit found that 90 percent of Quentin Wilson's own salary as a state cabinet official was quietly billed to other state agencies' budgets instead of his own office — hiding the true cost of government from taxpayers.

More likely: 7%
Less likely: 57%
No difference: 36%

Q10: Quentin Wilson has held a government job in some form for parts of six different decades, dating back to 1973 — moving between congressional staff jobs, state agency posts, and lobbying gigs.

More likely: 14%
Less likely: 46%
No difference: 41%

Q11: While running Missouri's Department of Revenue, Quentin Wilson was registered as a lobbyist for his own agency — a practice so controversial that the Missouri House voted to strip $225,000 in lobbyist salaries from his department's budget.

More likely: 8%
Less likely: 58%
No difference: 35%

Q12: After leaving Missouri government, Quentin Wilson ran a California nonprofit where his pay reached $556,000 in a single year — and he collected a $150,000 severance check when he left in 2016. The organization was involved in student loans.

More likely: 9%
Less likely: 51%
No difference: 40%

Q13: Quentin Wilson is endorsed by the Missouri AFL-CIO, which has formally backed Medicare for All — a plan backed by Democrat Socialists of America that independent budget analysts say would require more than doubling federal income tax rates to pay for.

More likely: 28%
Less likely: 49%
No difference: 23%

Now, sometimes in a survey like this, people change their minds. I will read you the original ballot question once more.

Q14: Candidates in the upcoming November General Election for State Auditor are listed below. If the election were held today, for whom would you vote?

Scott Fitzpatrick: Republican: 46%
Quentin Wilson: Democrat: 34%
Dustin Coffell: Libertarian: 6%
Undecided: 14%
